"Mr. Washington Simmons is 'a conjurer,' who, after the fashion of the celebrated Wijalba Frikell, of St.
James's Theatre, London, comes before his audience for their delusion by his personal powers alone, and without apparatus. We have in these colonies seen no professor of this sort better than Jacobe or Anderson, and we can all remember how much of what they did was due to their mechanical appliances. It was no wonder to see them put money into a box which we knew had false sides, bottom, and top, nor were we surprised to find a wastot that had apparently been fired out of a sham blunderbuse, taken evenrully out of an egg; but Mr. Simmons does none of these things. He shakes a shawl, to show its emptimess, and without going behind or near a table, or any piece of furniture at all, he brings out was after vase full of water. Percons in the crowd write names whose initials are found written on his arm. Sixpences are vase full of water. Percons in the crowd write names whose initials are found written on his arm. Sixpences are vase full of water. Percons in the crowd write names whose initials are found written on his arm. Sixpences are unbed into half-crowns close under the spectators' eyes; nor can the practiced observer find out more than that it is strick. Rechlefs taken frue ledies necks are cut into shreds and restored by a gesture, and all is done without any extraneous aid. The

THE GOULBURN HERALD, established 1848; printed by steam.—From the number of years it has been established, and from its extensive circulation, is undustredly the best advertising medium in the Southern extraits. The increase in the number of its subscribers keeps pace with the development of the gold-fields and of the recourse of the districts in which it circulates, and has been so great as to necessitate the introduction of steam sechinery in the printing department. With the exception of the MATILAND MERGURY, the GOULBURN HERALD is printed by steam; which fact speaks more for the extent of its circulation than any mere secrition, between confident. The advertising terms are 3s. for the first inch, and is. 3d. for every additional inch, such insertions, with a reduction of one-fourth for thirteen insertions, and of one-third for twenty-six insertions.

Business during the week has been active, and the Randwick races have not, as usual, interrupted transactions. In consequence of the Conference and the assumption that a uniform tariff will be proposed by the Government at the meeting of Parliament there has been some speculation in several articles, particularly tea, rice, and rum, which have consequently advanced in price. Whether these surmises with regard to the alteration of the tariff will prove correct remains to be seen, but we hardly think, in the face of the resolution for abolishing the tea and sugar duties passed two sessions ago, that Parliament will be inclined to double the duty on tea. The placing a duty on rice equal to that of Melbourne, however, may be a more favoured preposal, because it will, to a certain extent, be fixing the duty on the Chinese who are the principal consumers of this article. The following is the latest report of our markets.

Flours is firm, and prices have an upward tendency, fine flour $13 10-. Hart's $14 per ton. Wheat is also fismer; Adelside is quoted at $6. $6d, per bushel.

Some large sa'ces of Bysas' porter have been made at $8. $6d., but there are now buyers at that price. The present quotations range from $8. $6d. to $9. $6d. Brandy is unsitered.

Sales have been made at this rate th's week, and as it is expected by some persons that a duty of £2 per ton will be placed on rice, small lots cannot be obtained except at a higher figure. The price is at present optional with the holders, who, under present circumstances, seem inclined rather to advance prices. Ball is steady: Liverpool remains at £3 16s. to £4 per ton.

An : often do I wait and watch, And look up, straining through the Real With longing eyes, my friend, to catch Faint glimpees of your white Ideal,

I know she loves to rest her feet Ey slum brous seas, and hidden strand; But mostly hints of her I meet On moony spots of mountain land, I've never reached her shining place, And only cross at times a gleam; As one might pass a fleeting face Just on the outside of a Bream.

But you may climb, her happy Choice! She knows your step, the maiden true; And ever when she hears your voice, She turns, and sits, and waits for you,

How sweet to rest on breezy crest, With such a Love, what time the Morn Locks from his halls of rosy rest, Across green miles of gloaming corn?

How sweet to find a leafy nook, When bees are out, and Day burns mut Where you may hear a passion'd brook Play past you, like a mellow flute!

Ge, turning from the sunken sun, On fields of dim delight to lie— To close your eyes, and muse upon The twilight's strange divinity!

Or through the Night's mysterious noon, While Sound lies husht amongst the trees To sit and watch a mirror'd moon Float over sliver-sleeping seas!

Oh, vain regret ! why should I stay
To think and dream of joys unknown?
You walk with her from day to day,
I faint afar off—and alone,

SATURDAY, MAY 2 1863

THE acceptance of office is equivalent to the resignation of a seat. It is necessary therefore for Mr. SMART to appear before his constituents, and sgain to ask for their suffrages. He has accepted the not very easy or promising task of managing our finance and adjusting our revenue to our expenses. revenue to our expenses. As a new man in official life his fitness is a matter to be determined hereafter. That he has conducted his own affairs with prudence and success is certainly in his favour. We have no idea that utter ignorance of ordinary business, and a chronic discrepancy in private accounts is any indication of patriotism or any preparation for public service. public service. At the same time it may be ad-mitted that there is some difference between the elements of success in private and in public affairs. The merchant deals with transactions of a more limited nature. He has to determine the probabilities of the markets, the qualities of goods, and the credit of his customers. He has in some degree the guidance of the general movement about him, and the experience of others with whom he comes in daily contact. He may resolutely attend to his own affairs, and by watching while others sleep, or waiting while others rush on, obtain advantages which indicate rather moral than mental qualit steadiness of character rather than quickness of intellect. But to understand the management of a political body—the probabilities of general prosperity or adversity—the causes which make prosperity or adversity—the causes which make taxation fluctuate, and the ready means by which it may be adjusted, requires a kind of education not absolutely dissimilar, but of a higher grade and greater mystery.

The late TREASURER must be deemed tolerably fortunate because, what with the large sums of money he "eaved" by recommendations.

sums of money he "saved" by not spending it, and the increase of revenue by the sudden influx and the increase or revenue by the sudden innux of gold-diggers at a particular period, and the happy chances by which he escaped the loss of his principal duties, while making a show of resigning them, he was enabled to weather the session with as much success as if he had been, as perhaps he is, a skilful pilot. We understand that he resigne to his successor a more difficult. that he resigns to his successor a more difficult that he resigns to his successor a more difficult task, and that Mr. Smarr will have to definitely refuse concessions which his predecessor promised but never made—that he will have to diminish the supply or enlarge the circle of taxation; and that, in short, he comes into office when the difficulties of Government are likely to try his temper and ability to the utmost. Mr. Swarr, however, utmost. Mr. SMART, however, has one advantage certainly. He enters a House where he will find very few capable of following any financial statement or calculation, and if the same system should succeed as prevailed during the past two or three years, the question will not in any shape depend upon the eloquence either of the Government or of the Opposition To us it is so far a matter of congratulation that the commercial and social character of the new Treasurer will justify confidence in his integrity of purpose, and that we shall have nothing to do but to examine his open proceedings. Under these circumstances, how is it that we their support of Mr. Smarr, while we hear in all quarters the movement of deputations to try to work up some adventurous politicians to enter the list against the new THEASURER? Is it that these gentlemen differ from the TREASURER in opinion? or that they are general opponents of the existing Government? or that they are "dry?" We have heard of their visiting two or three persons who have been formerly members of Parliament, carnestly entreating them to "come out," but when pushed for their reason they could find none to give save such as had a strong smell of beer and tobacco. To some persons, the only value of the electoral privilege is that they give an occasion for spending of money. If this money went among the whole community, — if every man got a pound for his vote, the thing would got a pound for his vote, the thing would be fair and square; but it must be recollected that money spent by candidates is confined to a small proportion of the electors. The great bulk would scorn to tasts at the expense of the man upon whom they would impose an onerous These are expenses to which people, or desperate ambition, will not submit, unless with an expectation of indemnity. If a member goes into the House upon the shoulders of a clique with corrupt purposes, they may fairly require from him a share of the profit. They may say, "we are about to give you a plact—a contract—family patronage—in short, public money; and it is only right that we should beforehand secure our share of the Without our help you would be as spoil. Without our help you would be as poor as we are; by it you are placed in a seat of honour, and within reach of the public purse." All this may be fair enough, but it is hard that an honest candidate who means to serve the public, and to do rothing for himself inconsistent with that service, should be put to expenses, or that the electors should refuse their suffrace because he will neither suite and the suffrace here will neither suffrace because here will neither suite and the suffrace here will neither suffrace here will neither suffrace here.

their suffrage, because he will neither cajole nor The principle of opposing a candidate who accepts office is a very questionable one. No doubt the provision of the law by which a seat is vacated implies the right on the part of the electors to deny re-election; but if there be no public grounds on which the opposition should be offered, it is a mere vexation and folly to interrupt the free action of representative institutions by throwing out the official candidate. A man who accepts a seat in Parliament with the view of representing the people undertakes an onerous duty, but he does more and better if, being qualified for the task, he accepts a share in the Government. His fitness is a subject chiefly for the consideration of the Parliament, and without saying that there are no occa-sions when opposition would be advisable—for there unquestionably are such—we cannot fancy that in this there is any reason for the electors of Balmain to prefer any candidate to

THE charming weather of the last few days has made the postponement of the Cook demonstration a subject of discontent and regret. It must, however, be remembered that the public are to blame, who, by their delay in applying for tickets while they were watching the course of the weather, brought the projectors of the commemoration face to face with a great responsibility and very small support. The bril-liant days we have enjoyed since the decision, has made multitudes feel that the failure of the demonstration was the loss of a fine holiday. Another year, however, may afford better Cook to pay their hero worship upon the spot where he planted the flag of England.

We have heard in various quarters complaints of the number of our holidays, and the loss of time and interruption of business which result from these festivals. "Let us," sayth-y, "reckon up the hours devoted to pleasure by the number of hands that are idle. Let us calculate the quantities of positry with and the same and devoted to pleasure by the number of hands that are idle. quantities of poultry, wine, and formented drinks—of confectionery and fruit, consumed in addition to the demands of ordi of drees and loss of articles of value in this universal and costly locomotion. Let us put all these together, and society will see how great is the amount of sacrifice suspends the activity of the mechanic, the tradesman, and the merchant."

Such are the calculations which have fallen upon our ears—not, however, without the in-terruption of objections. The youthful members of our community are unanimous in dis-claiming all such mouldy calculations. They are for movement and joy. They see great felicity in escaping from the dark counting-house or murky shop, from the bench or the anvil, to put into motion other muscles than are ordinarily exercised, and to inhale the sweet air —to saunter as if they belonged to the leisured classes, or to assume the guise and the step of sportsmen. To see the blue sky—to toss on the waters—to run over the race ground—to bring down the paroquette—to do anything in short but hard work-or as different as possible from their common employments, is to their perverse minds a matter of rejoicing. Hence, thousands of good wishes favoured the promised holiday, not so much on account of Cook or the Bay which has attained such sinister celebrity, but from the idea that it was a noble thought to invent another day of "outing" and liberty. Whether Cook, or BONAPARTE, OF ALEXANDER THE GREAT were the hero of the hour, it was all the same.

There have not, however, been wanting others who have maintained that the seeming others who have maintained that the seeming pecuniary loss is wholly imaginary. They assert that the days of holiday, as they are employed by the people, give refreshment to the mind and invigorate the frame; that the cobwebs are brushed off from the intellect—that the ideas are expanded—that the selfish spirit generated by a perpetual conflict for gain is in some degree abated. They maintain that the money which flows out in various forms of expense is only exchanged not sunk and that the pense is only exchanged, not sunk, and that the unusual labour and attendance may be deemed an extra produce against the extra consumption. Then, it is urged that to leave out relaxation and amusement from the circle of human habits is to misunderstand the interests of life. No man considers that he has wasted money when he spends it for the direct recovery of his health. Thus it is probable that healthful and rational relaxation prevents much more disease than the physician heals. Better, say they, to stop and oil the machine than allow it to creak and rust! Better inhale the fresh air than be dependent upon artificial stimulants. Society, they urge, is improved by these universal turnings is improved by these universal turnings out for the purpose of enjoyment and relaxation. They give an object to respecta-bility of apparel, and instruct all classes of society to behave with good order and decorum. A crowded park, for instance, where all move or in their respective lines, or under the universal gaze, makes a better impression as to what constitutes the real enjoyment of life and the advantage of decent apparel and the necessity for decorous behaviour, than could be derived from the schools. For our part we believe in holidays in moder ation—not to trench upon the regular order and course of business, but to interrupt it by those breaks which, if observed universally, can hardly be regarded as an individual loss. There is greater activity before and after, just as a hope can afford to race up a hill when he has in immediate prospect the relief of an easier descent on the other side. But the great con-sideration doubtless is, that man is not meant to be a mere labour machine:—that it is not to be a mere labour machine; -that it is not to be a mere labour machine;—that it is not intended he should be the slave of his own wants, much less to the luxuries of others, but that he should have his intervals of quiet—of unrestrained movement, and of lightness of heart. The physician as well as the moralist will concur in this sentiment. They tell us of scholars who have pered over volumes until their even have heave the moral all their even have heave the moral all their even have heaves die and all the creament. their eyes have become dim and all the organs of their frame disordered—and who, when they have acquired by this frightful martyrdom the attainments by which they might have benefited mankind, have died as idiots. They tell us of merchants who began life with small resources, but whose growing business enabled them to enlarge their prospects until they seemed to be boundless; who, ab sorbed in one idea—the acquisition of money sorbed in one idea—the acquisition of money— lost all the enjoyments of life, and, having reached the enviable position of the millionairs, were reduced to such a con-dition of body and mind that they would have gladly parted with all but the most moderate fortune to enjoy again their days of vigour and strength prema-turely wasted. They tell us of workers whose dreary employment has rarely allowed them to see the light of the sun unclouded by some murky atmosphere—who have had re-course from the very weariness and exhaustion some murky atmosphere—who have had re-course from the very weariness and exhaustion to ardent spirits, and thus aggravated the mischief which was rapidly stealing away the allotted hours of life. They tell of others who, brooding over imaginary difficulties, and possible sorrows, have confined themselves to their own ill-ventilated and comfortless abodes from year to year, without breathing a fresh strugglers. to year, without breathing a fresh atmosp or exercising the muscles of the bady, and have shrunk into inanity and impotence before they have lived out half their days. They tell us that if men live much to themselves they acquire a peculiar confirmation, and moral idiosyncrasy, they imbibe each other's bad characteristics until they constitute a type, and often an odious one, and that this is the result of an exclusive intercourse never broken in upon by free movement among the masses of their fellow When, therefore, it is said that societ men. When, therefore, it is said that society is the loser by a holiday let it be remembered that a boliday, well spent, as it commonly is in these colonies, it adds largely to the stock of general health, while it subdues a multitude of prejudices. Holidays of this kind give broader and higher views of our common social relations, and the loss set down on one side of the and the loss set down on one side of the ledger is fully balanced by the gain on the other. We do not say that this gain accrues to every individual, but we speak of society at large. Gentlemen who have made their forthe pleasures of life, do not value holidays any ore than they value tea meetings. But the bulk of the people who can never have a day's leisure unless all others enjoy it—who are so wedged in with the general movement of society that they cannot withdraw without losing their positionwho, in short, are not their own masters,are exceedingly glad of a break in the ordinary employmen's of life in a way which shall neither wound their consciences by the interruption of their religious duties, nor expose them to the censure of those by whom they are employed We believe that the proper action of the intellect is to give a larger amount of employed We believe that the proper action of the intellect is to give a larger amount of physical repose. The man who makes a machine which wil do the work of fifty, may at first seem to have displaced them; but in the end he will divide the advantage between those for war, and their employers dependent upon fifty men and their employers dependent upon them. As we go on from stage to stage producing the supply for the various wants of society without any great toil in its members, we shall be able to afford a larger share of we shall be acce to anothe a large injurious leisure without diminishing in any injurious the amount of production. Life, to be degree the amount of production. Life, to be properly enjoyed and its duties to be fully discharged, demands much more than the supply of food and raiment. It requires that the intellect should be cultivated-that the father should have the name of sending his children to school and training them for their future duties; that he should have quiet to make himself acquainted with what is going on in the world; that he should have time to spend with his family, and realize the harmines of home. family, and realise the happiness of home-a pleasure known rarely to any save the middle classes, because home requires its surroundings as well as its associations. To say that what i necessary to acquire these blessings is wasted, is to mistake the nature and destinies of the human race; and therefore, though unfortu-nately for us there is no holiday with the Press, we are glad whenever the public interests admit of the general enjoyment and relaxation of the

A Gala-Day in Brishane—We are indebted to a correspondent for the following:—Monday, the 27th, was a distinguished day in Brisbane. The captain of the Gilden Clay had a week previously issued card for a defender of la fourchefte to the elde of the town, and vast preparations had been made, not only by him but by the captains of the other line ships lying in the bay, to impar; a striking cleat to the event. A steamer was in attendance at the wharf at Brisbane at nine o clock, to convey the invited to the ship, a distance of about twenty-five miles. The weather proved to be "beautiful exceedingly," and from that hour up to ten, the gay crinolines of the beauties of Brisbane thraw a most festal colouring on the streets as they passed along to the steamer. The Governor and Lady Bowen honoured the sisembly with their presence, and everything became propitious tor a day of enjoyment. As the Yarra, bound for Sydney, steamed over the bar into the bay, the scene was strikingly beautiful and imposing. Her Majesty's steam slop Proner was at that moment getting underway for England, and his Excelence the Governor had just paid a parting visit to the officers. He was then leaving the Foncer—the yards were manned, and a salue was fired by her in honour of his visit. The poop of the Golden City was crowded with beautiful faces, and in a moment after seen was gaity itself. But that which contributed meast to the gradeur of the days was the presence of the efficers in full uniform and with swords and tecked hava. The captain and master paced the briege, watching the wo king of the ship, and the first licutenant (also with full dress, cocked hat, and swood) the forcessite. It ladies on the Golden City's poop recemed bewildered with admiration; but a laudsman on board the Yarra said the cocked hat might have been better left below when a ship-of-war is underway. The Yarra steamed away as abon as her boat returned, and the Pioneer immediately followed. The speed of the latter was such that in a few minutes she was abreast of the Yarra, but having got there the difference of speed disappeared, till at least the Yarra began to drop her rival astern. In twenty minutes the Pioneer was a mile astern, and the captain of the Yarra in a most provoking and wasgish sentiment hoisted the signal "Get up all possible steam." The pendant acknowledging the message was duly hoisted. Then, as the distance of the Yarra was increasing, the captain hoisted the signal "I wish you a pleasant voyage," which was duly answered, "I thank you." The Yarra cleared the Heads about seven o'clock, and then observed the Pioneer about two miles astern, bearing away to the rooth. Her destination was first to Caps York, to convey to the new settlement at Port Albany certain plants of tropical fruits to be planted there as the ploncers of future occupation. She wou'd then proceed by way of the Cape to Regland.

We saw one wheel and other applicances erected, but the principal portion of the work is carried on by ground sluicing. The gold is distributed in every portion of the gravel underneath the overlying sand or silt, which averages from two and a half to five feet in depth. This gravel is thickly interspersed with round boulders and large stones, making the races very troublesceme to excavate. There is, generally speaking, however, a good prospect of gold to be obtained in every dish, and it transpired that at the last washing (and these washings take place every fortnight), a party of three took out 24 ounces. From the general appearance of the place there can be no doubt that the gold deposited here finds its way from the ranges bounding the whole water-shed of the Shoalhaven, and if there was any chance of getting water, there would no doubt be a large return.—Braidcood Observer.

SUPREME COURT -PRIDAY. SITTINGS IN BANCO.

BEFORE the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Wise,

SUPREME COURT.—FRIGAT.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.

BEFORE the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Wise,

BROWN V. MILLER.

This was an appeal from the Parramatia District Court in an action for breach of an aliqued undertaking to relinquish business in favour of a person who had purchased the defendant's stock, &c. Small damages had been recovered in a previous suit. In the present case £100 thanages had been awarded upon the principle that defendant's continuing in business was "a continuing trespase." But, on a review of the whole case, their Honors had arrived at a conclusion that, upon the facts alleged, no action would line. The only remaining question was whether in such a case the Court could direct the entiry of a verdict for the defendant, or whether, in setting saide the verdict for the defendant, or whether, in setting saide the verdict for the plaintiff, they must contine themselves to the ordering of a new trial. The point was argued between Mr. Sheppard, for the plaintiff, and Mr. Buller, for the defendant.

Their Honors held that an appeal from a District Court was, in effect, a rehearing of the whole case, in which it was the duty of the Court to make such an order as the law required, and, finding that the plaintiff had, in law, no cause of action, they were bound not to send down the ove for further trial, but to direct judgment to be entered in secondance with that ruling.

CAMPIBLE V. WHITE.

This was a motion to set aside a Judge's order, the questions being, first, whether a defendant who had pleaded "no consideration" to an autoin upon a promissory notes should be ordered to add a more detailed statement of the fact upon which have rich and, ascondally, whether the application was shade in due time.

The remaining and an appeal to the Privy Council in this case were settled by the Court, the amount of security being fixed at £250.

Röss V. MILLER.

The serument in this case was resumed and concluded.

The terms of the appeal to the Privy Council in this case was settled by the Court, the amount of ecourty being fixed at £250.

Röss v. MILLER.

The argument in this case was resumed and concluded. It was a rule not to set aside a Judge's order under which a second pies had been filed in an action upon a policy of insurance. The action was upon the insurance of a cargo of sugar. There was a count in the cediatery form sleging loss by the privat of the sea. The second count west to the following effect:—That, part of the cargo having been thrown overloard in the case of the cargo having been thrown overload by the action of persons over whom the plaintiff had no control, the sugar was condomed and handed, and was totally lost to the plaintiff. The facts averred were that there had been a survey, &c., under the authority of the French Casul. These averments were preceded by a general statement that the loss—(i.e.) the loss under the circumstances thus averved — was by the perial insured against. The existence of such a plea was objected to upon the ground that, if the facts alleged were admissible in proof in support of the plaintiff's claim, they could be placed in evidence under the first court, consequently that this second count was either an unancossary statement of matters of evidence, or that it set out facts which were not material, as in support of the issue which plaintiff had be made in this case to file two additional counts acting out the same facts more slaborately, as forming a basts for plaintiff's claim—internation; and secondly, under the Datch law, these transactions having taken place in a port of Netherlands India.

Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Stephen appeared in support of the application; and Sir William Manylog Of C. Mr. Mexico.

transactions having taken place in a gort of N etherlands. India.

Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Siephon appeared in support of the application; and Sir William Mannag, Q.C. Mr. Mr. Martin, Q.C., and Mr. Darley in support of the order. Incidentally a question was raised as to whether more than two ounsel cherch about the same there had been no such limitation imposed in reference to arguments on rules nist.

Their Honors allowed the count to stand conditionally upon certain alterations being made in it to prevent the defendants from being embarraseed. These were to strike out the allegations as to part of the crye having been cast overbeard before entering port; and as to the consul's contificate and survey; leaving the allegations to be simply thus: that during the continuance of the vorage the sugar was taken possession of at Sourabays, without plaintiff's content, by certain parties over whom he had no control. The costs of the application to be costs in the cause.

Sir William Manning, Q.C., in reference to this case said that he had now an affidevit of service having been effected upon the complainant on Wednesday. There had been, however, an intimation from complainant's attorney that he would be ready by Friday next.

Their Honors doubted whether, with the number of cases awaiting judgment, and upon which it would be necessary for them to consult, it would be possible for them to set spart any day next week for this case.

After some further discussion, the case was ordered to be placed on the paper for Saturday (to day) to be further spoken to.

After some further discussion, the case was ordered to be placed on the paper for Baiurday (to day) to be further appoken to.

EX PARTE MAIN.

This was an application by rule nist under the Impounding Act to set aside, by prohibition, an order by the Mosma Rench. This order was one directing the refurding of cortain charges for impounding.

Mr. Facuett appeared in support of the rule, and Mr. Martin, Q.C., in support of the magistrates' order.

The press on whose behalf the present application was made was ctaird to be a married women, and the impounding to have been made by her husband as her agest. £35 charges had been imposed. The justices had ordered the refunding of these charges upon the ground that there had been a mismomer of the locality—the cattle having been said to have treepassed on the Pericola station, instead of on the Taitaila station. The grounds upon which it was reught to set aside this order were that the land was described with sufficient correctness, insamuch as the name used was that on the complainant's receipt for her deposit st a free selector; also that the order was bed, as having been made sgainst Main and his wife, whereas the latter only had be ne summomed.

In arguing the case Mr. Martin stated the facts to be these. That Mesers, Kirk and Goldsborough were the occupiers of extensive stations on the Murray. They had there an enclosed paddock of 900 acres, which they had fenced in at a cost of £500, and or which some of the most valuable of their stock—including cortain very valuable bulls—were depositured. In the centre of this paddock this Mrs. Main had "free selected" forty acres, paying a deposit of but £10, her haband having, all probability, made a similar selection fenced in, but simply marked out by a poet at seaso corner. Across the imaginary line between these poets seven of the winds the machinery of cases in an General condition precedent that notice should have been given to the output party. Secondly, that there was no available of the institute of the paddock had pa charts attached to the sepositions, but simply a receipt for the payment of £10 deposit for the purchase of 40 acres of land at Pericola. It was submitted that this was insufficient. Also that the fact of this paddock having been fanced in rendered the whole of it "improved land." A fine of £10 had been imposed in addition to the order for the return of the damages. It was admitted that a difficulty existed as to this, but it was argued that, as the impounding had been closely illegal, there might be a severance of the orders as to fine send as to the return of the demages. Hally, that as Mrs. Main, being a married woman, could not coopey, she could not impound.

The argument did not terminate.

ENGINA V. MASON.

On the motion of Mr. Meymott, a writ of attachment was directed to be issued against the defendant, for disobedience of a rule of Court ordering the defondant to pay the costs of discharging a rais nist for prohibition.

DISAPPEARANCE OF Ms. LAZARUS COREN.—The town of Forbes has been thrown into a state of great perturbation during the last two days, by the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Cohen, of the Commercial Hotel. The facts are these. Last Wadnesday, Mr. Cohen, left the town, and went out to stay a few days, for change of sir, near the river, about five miles away; taking with him his son, a bay about twelve. Un Monday morning they started on their return; and, on arriving within a mile of home, sat down under a tree. Mr. Cohen then sent the boy home alone; and, as he himself did not shortly follow, Mrs. Cohen became altrated, and sent out to where the fisther and son had parted. Several gentlemen at once joined in the search; and, with a blackfellow, tracked Mr. Cohen from where the boy left him, to the river, near Morton's slaughter-yard. Here he had gone prily down the bank, and then retraced his steps; and, from that time, no clue could be obtained to the direction taken by the unfartunate gentleman. H. V. R. COMPANY.—A meeting of the above company was held on Tuesday last, when Captain Edgerton read a letter from the Brigade Office, relative to the supply of new clothing for those who were entitled to the same. Some slight discussion took place as to whether the facings of the new uniforms should be red instrad of green. Subsequently the meeting divided on the question, when it was decided in favour of the green by the casting vote of Captain Edgerton. No doubt it is well this decision was come to, for it would have looked singular indeed to have seen some with red facings, and others with green, and which must otherwise have been the case, as many of the company have not had their clothing more than six months. At the conclusion of the above meeting, arrangements were made by the committee appointed for that purpose, for the shooting for the companies prizes on Tuesday next. The company is divided, into three classes, the first and second shots in each class to receive a prize. Some good shooting is expected on the occasion.

APRIL 28TH.—THE NEW TWELVE-MILE RUSH.—
Although dulness still pervades the town, the reports from these diggings are turning out satisfactory, and miners that are working are resping the beneat of their exertions. I have heard, upon what I believe to be good authority, that treive ounces to the load have been obtained in some instances, and that at a depth of about thirty feet only; but I should mention that there are a number of men on the ground who re disinclined to work, slthough a rich harvest might probably be the result of their efforts, who have been permitted to take up ground without working same, which very much tends to impede mitting onterprise.
I know not why it should be so that this should be permitted, but I belive it has become a practice, which, unless stopped, must prove disastrous to the mining interest, and only tend to enc. urage a class of idlers, for whom the privilege to be derived under the Gold-fields. Act was never intended. The suthorities here are, however, not to bleme for this state of things. It appears that this power of taking up ground without working it ("shepherding," as described by miners) is derived under one of the new bylaws of the local court, which received the sanction of the Government in February last, but the whole of which gives general dissattifaction, frem the fact of their repealing some of the most salutary regulations for the protection of miners that were ever framed.

In fact, the local court is looked upon as a mero sham, and, as far as I can see, it certainly is not properly constituted, or what the Legislature intended it should be. People naturally inquire from whomes it could have derived its power of doing that which the Executive cannot or could not do under any circumstance, namely, that of repealing the whole of the General Regulations framed and ordered by his Excellancy the Governor, with the advice of the Executive Council, passed under the awthority of the Goldfields Act, which it has done by the by-law referred to, and passing other rules, inapplicable to the necessities of the Gold-fields Act.

The farewell dinner to Captain Battys was attended by the principal stortkrepers and residents in the town. An address, expressive of the valuable services rendered by him, and of the regret felt at his departure, was presented on the occasion.

Mr. David Bruce, who was charged with horsestealing, appeared on Saturday in answer to his bail, before the police magistrate, who was satisfied by the evidence of the poundkeeper at Murradburrah that he was in lawful possession of the horse. I should mention that the magistrate intimated to Mr. Bruce that he was discherged without the slightest stain on his character—a circumstance that I em glad of having to notice, because it is a very rare occurrence here, sithough many persons have been discherged, as I have thought, agrinats whom an impactation could not rest.

Joseph Alexander, referred to in a previous communication, who had been remended from time to time, who was also charged with horse-stealing, has been let out of prison on bail to appear when called upon, there being no evidence sgainst him.

OAKEY HILL DIGGINGS.—FONTANA REEF.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT.]

ABOUT cleven miles eastward of Bathurst, April 29.

ABOUT cleven miles eastward of Bathurst, April 29.

ABOUT cleven miles eastward of Bathurst, April 29.

ABOUT cleven miles eastward of Bathurst, and south of the dividing range, between Clear Creek and that of Winburndale, stands Oakey Bill, at whose western hase runs Antonie's Creek. On the north-rn slope of this hill lies the reef from which was taken the quaris that, as you were informed by telegram, yielded sophendidly in the croshing.

The country in the vicioity has for a number of years attracted the attention of wandering diggers, from its undoubtedly auriferous aspect, and prospecting parties have from time to time pursued their operations almost to the point of success, but have invariably been compelled to desist upon learning that the land was private property, and that the proprictors decidedly objected to the discovery of any diggings in their neighbourhood. Men have been repeatedly warmed off, and have as repeatedly set to work again by means of slightly shifting the scene of their labours, and so concriving to clude the vigil nee of the owner or agon, as the case might be. It is said that on one occasion, so eager were a particular party to dig without molestrion, that they worked night and day to effect their object, and many aurmises are expressed as to the nature of ground which could call forth such unremitting exertions. At length, however, it was whispered that a portion of the land in the locality had not been clienated from the Crown, and in consequence of a rotusal to remove on the part of the prosent fortunate of coverers of the new ref, a survey was made, earling in the fact being elicited that the Government still retained about a section of the disputed ground, though hemmed in by private préperty in such a way as to leave no open means of access. This defect, however, sphears to be of easy remedy, for a reservation is the Crown gruis. Upon this unrold land the quartz res to be of easy romedy, for a reservation is the Drown gritis concedes the right to the Government of construcing a road at any time, in any direction they may require. Upon this unstold land the quartz zerf in ituated.

On Tuesday, the 28th instact, Mr. Mr. Lean, chief comm'ssioner of the Wertern gold-fielda, visited the spot, and in the presence of a few diagress and a number of goaletmen from Bethurst and the immediate neighbushood—in all about seventy persons—proceeded to mark put the claims for which application had been made. Accordingly, the beasing of the reef was take not consume the prospectors, in virtue of their discovery, ware allosted 400 yerds along the line, with the usual width of 100 yards, and application for a lease to work it has been made. Two leave applications for the ground nexth of the prospecting claim exhausted the whole of the area up to the boundary of parchased land in that duction; whate eight-block claims and two lease claims were surveyed to the south, leaving more yet to be taken up.

From the prospectors, who are Italians, your correspondent learnt that they had been prosecuting their search for the latt six months; that, having started from the Luchlan, with the purpose of going to New Zealand, they were induced upon the representation of some countrymen in Bathura; to forego their original intention, and devote a little net to prospecting the neighbourhood already indicated. Satisfied, from the spearance of the country of its autiferous nature, they traced eventually into Sir William Verrer's Glemoira estate. Here frontan (the head of the party) discovered a quartir reef, which he describes as of exceeding richness, but, bring unfortunated with the management of the estate in the sheeres of Sir William Verrer, who is in Europe), and offered to point out the locality, and lease a portion, if preference were given him in the selection of a claim, or to pay a large percentage of the proceeds in consideration of a permission to work, but without success—Mr. Johnson prohibiting an Frem the summit of Oakey Hill, a magnificent view of the country to the west and south is obtain d—the dividing range already alluded to shutting out everything to the north, and Mount Ovens towering up in the east, intercepting all scenery in that direction. To the west, however, the Bathurst Plains undulate towards the town, which appears at the distance like a collection of rocks, being joined in a northerly direction by the Macquarie Plains, which, in turn, are joined by the O'Connell Plains, a glimpse of which is caught through a couple of bald hills to the extreme south.

Setting aside the discovery of the Fontana of which is caught through a couple of bald hills to the extreme south.

Setting aside the discovery of the Pontana Reef, the character of the surface indicatons about the neighbourhood of Mount Ovens plainly evidence the auriferous nature of the soil, and there can be little doubt in the minds of those experienced is gold-fields lore, that a rich and extensive field exists there. Boldly defined reefs crop out in parallel lines, and masses of quertz are seen in all directions,—the bed-rock, where laid bare by the trenches, displaying that highly-coloured burnt slate so much in favour with diggers. But a difficulty arises in the ultimate development of the ground, from the fact of its being nearly all purchased property, the owners of which appear to be alarmed at the probability of a gold-field being discovered in their immediate proximity, and some what disposed to place obstacles in the way. It is to be hoped that other views will be entertained when the enhanced value of property in the neighbourhood of all diggings is taken into casideration, an indication of which is at once afforded in the smount to be paid to Mr. Sinclair for the mere rental of two acres of land; be this as it may, the Oakey Hill diggings are an established fact, and there can be no doubt that a rich gold-field has been discovered within a dozen miles of the municipality of Bathurst.

No can who is interested in a garden can have failed to observe the importone which the lover orders of men as Leuenback might tell us that "overy lest and a herd of animals feeding on it like oxen in a mradow," and each grain of sand gave shelter to inmomerate or returner, her subject which the oxen in a mradow," and each grain of sand gave shelter to innownerate or returner, he subject which of the oxen in a mradow," and each grain of sand gave shelter to innownerate on the compart, American blight on the spple, and other species of aphis on roses and honeysuckle. "HEARTLESS DEPRAVITY."

To the Editor of the Hersid.

Sin,—In a paragraph under the above heading, parily made up of remarks of your own and parily with a quotation from a correspondent, which appeared in last Saturday's Hersid, I have reason to believe that you refer to my unhappy case. That case is indeed a yery deplorable one; but it does not sirise from my being "the victim of seduction," or from sny imperper conduct on the pr to da person whom you call "the owner of a small collier trading between this port and Newer-de," but from the cruel and unnatural conduct of (I saw with shame) my own mother. I will, with your permasion, since you have dragged the matter before "to publ's, state the absolure facts of the case—facts the truth of which I establish by an affidavit, a copy of which I reclose.

During the last two years my parents have kept the public-house at Neat wan known as the John Bull Ire. My father was an invalid during the greatr. portion of the time, and—to my irrep-rable lot—dird about nev in weeks ago. His last days were embittered by the violent conduct of my mother, who, in a special manner, made mis the victim of hr bad temper. After my father's death, slihough I did all that wook of the house, in fact rell the work of a servant—for my mother did not keep one—she treaved me with the greatest histhoes; constantly abused me; called me names which I should blush to repeat; and finally, in a moment of phrensy, turned me out of doors. Within the last four months, the person you call "the owner of a collier," who lived near us, came to our house. He was invited there by my mother, whom he often befriended, and with whom he was on friendly terms till within the last three weeks. He never a leg of that he was a single man, ot on stated that he was mirried, and, in a word, was more a friend to the family than of mins in particular. After I had been turned out of doors by my mother, I returned to get my clothes. She then looked me up in a room, again cashing me herrible name, and actually sent for Dr. Nathan eme, and, perfectly satisfied with the unfounded nature of the cruel charges made against me, said my mother ought "to beg my pardou for the actual condition, and and my mother ought "to beg my pardou for the actual condition, and my mother ought "to beg my pardou for the actual condition, and my mother ought "to beg my pardou for the actual my mother ought when he week condition, made me unwell. I sm the daughter of Mrs. Brigg who keeps the licensed house known as the John Bull fun, at Nowtown, in the said colony. I have for nearly two years suffered great cruelty, injustice, and oppression at the hands of my mother, more particularly since my father's death, which occurred about six weeks ago. During that period mentioned she has frequently called me opprobrious sames, given me insufficient or had tood, and otherwise lit-treated me. About three weeks age abelocked me up in a room for more than nite days. She on a previous consiste turned me out of her house.

That paragraph is not true. I have not been seduced. That paragraph is not true. I have not been seduced. I was not induced by any person to leave my mother's bouse. I left it of my own accord secretly, and through bedily feer of my mother's violence, and took up my residence at my present place of abode, because the wile of the tennat of said house is a personal friend of mine, and gave me lodging.

JUDGE THERRY'S REMINISCENCES.

To the Editor of the Water of the Water of Judge Therry's Reminiscences, taken from the Australian and New Zealand Gazette, with a few extracts from his book. Speaking of the late Solomon Wiesmarb, the letraed Judge says...." I told him that, smongst other good things, 'education sided in the acquirement of property. 'Oh,' said ha, 'my views are quite different. I have four tons, and I say to Richard, 'There's a herd of cattle for you,' and to Tom, 'There's a herd of cattle for you,' and to Tom, 'There's a herd of cattle for you,' and to Tom, 'There's a herd of the whole the owner of large berds of cattle and flocks of sheep. Now, that's what I ca'l education, for by it they acquire merns to live.' ... "These four fine young men pursued the career their parent unwisely marked out for them; and, before I left the colony, from 'unprovident courses, they failed of success in life, and beer me involvents.' Now, of this statement respecting the sons, one-half is untrue. The oldest son was drowned at sea thirty years ago, and was not in olvent; the second and third sons were insolvent some years since, and so were hundreds of other p ople, many of them men of educatin. The youngest son died some years ago, and never was insolvent, and h's family are solvent now.

I am, Sir, yours, obediently, and yet where vegetation and wild animals abound,

"Mr. Duffield reports that the flesh of the Alpaca affords excellent earing. This is news to us; an; if the relish be not attributable to the appetite which travellers in 'deserts' usually acquire, the fact will add materially to the value of the animal, and it may, moreover, tend to modify the very obvious objections to its cultivation, which cannot fail to suggest themselves to the consideration of English cultivators. The alpaca seems to require the free range of uncultivated plains, and its hardiness enables it, as we have seen,
to live where no other animal can gain sub-istence;
but if it should prove to be a valuable addition to the butcher's shop, our great sheep-farmers may be induced to try whether its great accommodating powers will not enable it to attain perfection within the limits of enclosed grazing lands."

Sir Astley Cooper.—Probably, no surgeon of ancient or modern times enjoyed a greater share of reputation during his life than fell to the lot of Sir Asley. The Old and New World have alike rung with his fame; and perhaps a better example of this cas not be given than the fact of his signature being received as a passport among the mountains of Biscay by the wild followers of Don Carlos. A young English surgeon, seeking for employment, was carried as a pils ner before Zumalacarregui, who demanded what testimonials he had of his calling or his qualifications. Our countryman presented his diploma of the College of Surgeons; and the name of Astley Paton Cooper, which was attached to it, no sooner struck the eye of the Carlist leader than he at once received his prisoner with friendship, and appointed him a surgeon in his army.

IMAGINATION.—A contented citizen of Milan, who had never passed beyond its walls during the course of sixty years, being ordered by the governor not to sir beyond its gates, became immediately miserable, and felt so powerful an inclination to do that which he had so long contentedly neglected, that on his application for a release from this restraint being refused, he came quite mellactholy, and at last glided of grief. The pains of impri-onment, also, like those of servitude, are more in conception than in reality. We are all prisoners. What is life but the prison of the soul.

A Paper Copper Cur !—Any one who happens to desire a cup of tea or coffee finds that even when he at last seems likely to obtain the object of his wishes, he has still, before he can quench his thirst, to solve an almost insoluble problem. How can he drink his tea hot within the space of three minutes? As a ma'ter of fact, only a courageous fraction succeed in accomplishing the feat, and rows of scarcely tasvel cups testify the general failure. Some ingenous Germen, who ought particularly to be commended to the notice of Mr. Gladstone, has invented a paper cup, which will completely hold a draught of the hottest l'quid, and can be bought for a furthing. By means of this invention, the good people of Berlin take up and drink at their case, as they go along the railroad, the cups of coffee which comfort-loving Englishmen

STONEY MORNING HERALD, SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1863.

STONEY MAY 18 1 And I was a story of the control of the co

the parties. The jury at once found for the defendant.

LONDON CARMEN.—The system on which these men work is a bad one, and goes far to account for the numerous police court cases in which cabmen figure as defendants. They are like the unfortunate organ-grinders. They do not receive wages from their masters, but pay them so much a day. In order that this sum and the driver's own profit may be secured, horses and the public are made victims. A careful owner, driving his own cab and a pair of horses, calculates on earning 16s. or 16s. a day throughout the whole year, except during the autumn vacution and the two or three weeks after Christmas. These are dull times. The same amount is the sum paid by a driver for the hire off a cab and two horses. This pays the large cab-owner very well, seen though the horses he overworked. The driver has no interest in easing the animals, or obtaining a good character for the owner; his object is to get as many fares as he can in the day, and bully his riders out of as much morey as possible. These men drink a good deal at their own expense, and are frequently "treated" by their customers. They go through much hardship in the way of exposure to wet and cold, and long waits on the ranks. To these causes may be ascribed the habits of dissipation into which too many of them sink. It is to be hoped that the efforts of Lord Shafresbury and other philanthropists, who have turned their attention to the establishment of cab ren's cluts, may work a reformation.—Chambers' Edinburgh Jöurnal.

Girsiss.—At the last meeting of the Ethnological Society, a paper was rad "On the Origin of the Gipsies" by the president. The origin, as our old English has it, of the "outlandish persons calling themselves Egyptians or Gipsies" and constituting "a strange kind of commonwealth smong themselves of wandering impostors and jugglers," is at least a subject of great curiosity, not to say of etymological import. Although their first appearance in Europe was occeval with the century which witnessed the discovery of the New World and the new passage to the Indice, no one thought of ascribing to them a Hindso origin, and this hypothesis, the trath of which the author now proposed to examine, was of very recent date. Their Hindso origin was not for a long time even suspected; it has, however, of late years received general credence. The arguments for it consist in the physical form of the people, in their language, and in the history of their migration. Each of these topics the author examined separately in detail. The conclusion that the author same to was it at the gipsits, when above four centuries ago they first appeared in Western Europe, were already composed of a mixture of many different races, and that, the present gipsies are still more mongrel. In the Asiatic portions of their lineage there is probably a small amount of Hindoo blood, but this he thought was the utmost that can be predicted of their lindian pedigree. Strictly speaking they are not more Hindcos in lineage than they are Persians, Turks, Wallachians, or Europeans, for they are a mixture of all these, and that in proportions impossible to be ascertained. Dr. Shortt also read a paper, entitled "An account of the Yenadis of the Chingleput District." Interspersed over not only this district but also over most parts of Southern India, it a ruds class of people, by some supposed to have been aborigines of the peninsula. The tribe is known by the names of "Yenadi." "Villee." "Vader," and "Maranur." The word Yenadi is a carruption of Anathan, or a poor m

Twelve very superfor fine-weoled rams, 13 months old, the progeny of imported rams, at Ardmillan, in 1860.

The aires of the above rams remained at the Bazzar on view for sonie time after their arrival by the Ardmillan, before being dispatished to Mr. O'Brien's station, and attracted considerable interest. Competent judges (comprising several of our most experienced breeders) pronounced them to be pre-eminently valuable in three most essential respects, viz — Size of carcase, weight of fleece, and length and finences of staple, being, in fact, everything that was desirable. The present lot are in every respect remarkably characteristic of their sizes, and the attention of squatters in Queenaland and this colony are especially directed to this sale.
